

RUBLEVO APARTMENT

Tatiana and Dmitry Khoroshev, founders of Lighthouse Group and graduates of the Moscow Architectural Institute, have over 15 years of experience in interior design. Dmitry's internship at Columbia University and their current lecturing roles at the "Details" Interior Decorators School underscore their professional stature. Their philosophy emphasizes meticulous attention to detail, responsibility, harmony, and refined taste.

Their projects—featured in top Russian design magazines and realized across Europe—are known for their distinct signature style. Recognized six years in a row in AD's Top 100 Russian architects, their work stands out for its personalized, three-dimensional approach. Rather than starting with layouts, they envision volumes and proportions, crafting interiors that are both functional and emotionally resonant.

This philosophy was evident in their design of a 170-square-meter Moscow apartment, where natural surroundings set the tone. Tatiana and Dmitry added bespoke elements—art by Vera Martynov, vintage Japanese panels, Ukrainian ceramic lamps, Parisian flea market finds, and custom architectural features like a carved wooden wall and a hollow boulder fireplace. Their thoughtful renovation added 40 square meters of usable space, blending art, utility, and nature into a serene, soulful home.
